General Information

Dana (the Pali word for generosity) is an essential part of the 2,500 year-old Buddhist tradition. Our teachers freely offer the teachings, and are supported in turn by donations from participants who value what the teachings have brought to their lives. In the spirit of this tradition, we are committed to offering scholarship assistance to those who are genuinely unable to afford the price of a meditation retreat.

We would like you to be able to attend this retreat. However, our scholarship funds are limited. Each scholarship request is carefully assessed in terms of financial need, prior scholarships received, and funds availability. SSVK members will be given preference provided they fit within scholarship criteria. It is not always possible to provide funds for every request. If you are able to pay a portion of the retreat costs, please do so. This allows us to offer scholarships or special rates to other people in need.

How to apply:

1. Complete your registration form and scholarship application form (both are available online);
2. Send the completed forms in sufficient time that we receive them no later than 28 days (4 weeks) before the first date of the retreat.

Renunciate Monastics: Renunciate Monastics are invited to attend retreats. No deposit is required. Please consider these words an invitation to attend our retreats. We do ask that you register in advance as some retreats do fill and space may not always be available.

Cancellations

Cancellation policies apply to scholarship applicants and recipients (for details see information on Retreat Registration form). If you need to cancel from a retreat, please contact us immediately. This gives us time to make the space available to another applicant.
